Committee Works on Draft Differences

SEES CONFLICT ON AGE LIMIT, 60-DAY DELAY

Joint Senate-House Group Seeks Compromise on Conscription.

FOES KEEP UP ATTACK

Rep. Harter of Ohio Backs 44-Year Draft to Make Veterans Available.

BULLETIN

RUSHVILLE, Ind.—(U P)—Republican presidential nominee Wendell L. Willkie today called for the elimination of the Fish amendment which would delay military conscription for 60 days pending a new voluntary enlistment campaign to build up the U. S. army.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Members of a joint senate house committee named to adjust differences between the two bodies on the conscription bill met today with two outstanding conflicts to be settled. They are.

1. Shall men be drafted from age limits of 21-30 inclusive, as proposed by the senate or 21-44 inclusive, as voted by the house?

2 Shall the Fish amendment which prohibits draft of men until 60 days after a call for volunteers has been issued, be approved?

The possibility of a compromise, with the 21-30 age limit being accepted and the Fish amendment scrapped, was foreseen as members of the conference declared they approached the problems with open minds.

Twelve million men are involved in the age-limit amendment. Army officials estimated that 12,000,000 would be subject to registration and possible draft between ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, while the broader limits would include 24,000,000 people.

Administration leaders were bitterly opposed to the Fish amendment and it was virtually certain to be scrapped by the conference.

BOND ISSUE

Ashland Voters Asked For $230,000 City Building.

ASHLAND—City voters will be asked to decide in November whether or not the city shall issue $230,000 in bonds for the erection of a new municipal building, according to a resolution passed last night by council at its regular meeting.

The resolution requests the Ashland county board of elections to place the issue on the ballots this fall.

Action by council followed recommendations by a special committee appointed several months ago by Mayor Howard Lutz and headed by J. L. Clark. The committee urged erection of a new structure to house administrative offices, city library, and a public auditorium rather than renovation of the present city building.

Site being considered for the new building is at the corner of Main and Center streets.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN MAINE

Party Leaders Call Victory Happy Omen for National Success in November.

(By Associated Press)

Maine Republicans won an unbroken series of victories yesterday in all the major contests of the first state-wide election of the presidential year, and party leaders promptly hailed the performance as an omen for national successes in November.

By pluralities exceeding in most cases those registered in 1936 and 1938, the "down east" Republicans elected a United States senator, a governor and three members of the house of representatives

On the basis of all but complete returns, Rep. Ralph O. Brewster had a lead of approximately 45,000 votes over former Democratic Governor Louis J. Brann in the senate race. Sumner Sewall, successful gubernatorial candidate, was ahead by more than 70,000 votes.

Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, withheld formal comment at Rushville, Ind., until he had the final figures, but aides said he was pleased by the results.

The outcome of the voting did

BOARD GIVEN RED PETITIONS, STARTS CHECK

Election Officials To Hold Special Meeting to Act on Communist Signers.

MARRIOTT TO STUDY THEM

Prosecutor Says He'll Look Over Signatures, Then Map Action, If Any.

Richland county election board officials, today scrutinized two Communist petitions circulated in the county and recently filed with Secretary of State George M. Nefer to determine the validity of signatures.

A. F. Porter, clerk of the election board, said the petitions arrived at board headquarters shortly after 8 a. m. today, and that he and Deputy Clerk Walter Underwood had made a double check of signatures to determine "whether or not the signers are qualified electors."

Porter said he was not permitted to reveal what he and Underwood had discovered

"Our findings will be submitted to the election board at a special meeting probably tomorrow," he explained

He declared the board would consider the findings of the clerk and deputy and make a report regarding the qualifications of the signers to the office of the secretary of state.

Meanwhile Prosecuting Attorney G W Marriott who has indicated that he may conduct an investigation of widespread accusations by signers that their signatures were obtained by misrepresentation said this morning that he had not yet seen the petitions

"I'll look at them today, if I can possibly find the time," Marriott said, "but whatever evidence I find will merely form a groundwork for further investigation."

Marriott indicated that it would be necessary for him to interview signers and circulators of the pe-

BIGELOW ACTIVE

Gets Approval on Wording of $40 Pension Petition.

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati, obtained approval today from Secretary of State George M Neffner of the wording of petitions to be circulated to initiate state legislation guaranteeing $40 monthly incomes to old age pensioners in Ohio

The petitions propose a $40 pension income and abandonment by the state of its liens on real estate and insurance policies held by old age pensioners Both proposals were included in the platform adopted by the state Democratic convention.

If Bigelow gets 75,000 names on the petitions 10 days before the legislature meets next Jan. 6, the proposals will be incorporated in bills for consideration by the legislature.

If the legislature's disposition of the bills is not satisfactory to the petitioners, they can obtain an additional 75,000 names and place the questions to a referendum of voters in November, 1941.

Driver In School Bus Crash Guilty Of Reckless Driving

Unable to offer any explanation for the collision of his truck with a Union rural school district bus last Friday afternoon when nine pupils were injured and 22 others were shaken up and bruised, Edward Bielen, 23, Masinee, Wis., today pleaded guilty in common pleas court to charges of reckless operation of the truck.

After hearing the plea, Judge C. H. Huston said he would defer sentence "probably until tomorrow" pending further information on condition of one of the children.

Highway Patrolman W. C. Smith, who had filed charges against Bielen and who was in court for the hearing, explained that Harold Braden, 17, R. D. 1, Mansfield, who was injured in the crash, had been returned to the hospital today for further treatment.

Judge Huston said there were other phases of the case which might also need investigation before sentence is passed. He indicated that the court would be interested in knowing "the physical condition of the driver."

The court made these assertions after questioning Bielen from the bench

Bielen said, under questioning that he had been driving "since he was old enough to hold a wheel," that he had not been drinking, and that he was not sleepy at the time of the crash

In court with Bielen was Chester Golembiewski owner of the semi-tractor-trailer involved in the accident.

Flee To Shelters To Escape German Bombs

TWO FUGITIVES HELD IN CANTON

Inmates Who Scaled Wall at O. S. R. 10 Days Ago Jailed; Two Still at Large.

Two of four inmates who went over the wall at the Ohio State reformatory 10 days ago and were the object of a widespread search after they were routed in an attempt to burglarize a Millersburg feed store, were reported in custody today.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke said he was notified by Stark county authorities that the pair had been apprehended near Canton. No details of the capture were disclosed.

The fugitives held in the Stark county jail, are Ernest Hartman, 21, and Walter Splitt, 19, both of Summit county. Glattke said he was informed. Arthur Steen, 19, Wayne county, and Frank Smetkowski, 21, Cuyahoga county are still at large.

The superintendent said he did not know yet whether the pair would be returned to the reformatory immediately. He said it was possible they may be prosecuted by either Stark or Holmes county authorities.

The quartet fled from the reformatory Aug. 30, fashioning a rope and going over the wall under cover of a heavy fog. Stealing a parked automobile in Lucas, they attempted to loot the Sunshine Feed store at Millersburg but were routed by Holmes county Sheriff Harry Weiss.

One of the inmates was believed injured from a charge from Weiss' riot gun and a 24-hour search was made by peace officers and state highway patrolman in the vicinity of Millersburg.

'Tag Day' to Help Buy New Uniforms for High Band

Mothers Set Saturday as Date for Donations to Fund With Which to Replace Frayed, Patched Uniforms.

It'll be "Tag Day" in Mansfield Saturday. Mr and Mrs. Mansfield, and if you want the Mansfield Senior high school band to have new uniforms, you'd better dig down and get "tagged."

The uniforms they're now wearing have been looking a bit frayed the past few years, after their nine years' service And the patched up trousers are beginning to show.

Realizing this, a group of band members and mothers decided it was time to do something about it, so they organized and decided on "Tag Day" as a means to get new uniforms.

The tags will be sold on all street corners, in stores, office buildings, and on the street Saturday.

Downtown merchants have pledged themselves to aid the band in its campaign and this week posters will be placed in store windows, telling their patrons about "Tag Day."

GENERALS FIRED

11 Rumanian Officers Ousted By Dictator's Orders.

BUCHAREST—(AP) Dismissal of eleven Rumanian generals, held partly responsible for Rumania's recent loss of territory was announced today as Gen Ion Antonescu, military dictator, continued his investigation of former King Carol's regime

The decree dismissing the men, who included George Argesanu, a former premier, and Ion Ilcusu, former war minister, said they practiced political activity contrary to the good of the state and used "flattery to gain high office."

How badly Carol himself fared when he abdicated last week was still a matter of conjecture The king left a vast "personal empire" under the shadow of expropriation when he went into exile, but he had secretly converted many of his personal holdings into cash long ago, informed sources said

Whether he carried any of this cash with him in his flight was not known.

Big Buildings Threatened By German Fliers

Bank of England, London Bridge and Law Courts Appear Targets; St. Paul's Cathedral Menaced by Nazi-Started Fires

BULLETIN

LONDON—(INS)—London's third air raid warning of the day and the 60th of the war sounded at 5:25 p. m. today (11:25 a. m. EST). The sirens sounded after enemy planes were reported in the vicinity of a southeast coastal town headed for the capital.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Hundreds of thousands of Londoners were sent to shelters by air raid sirens today, just as they were shaking themselves loose from the plaster and ashes of a third sleepless night of German bombing that spread ruined and fire-blackened patches from the east end shipping and industrial areas to the financial heart of their city.

The drone of many engines could be heard in the sky during the 25-minute alarm that came just after noon.

In a brief battle over the London area, fought so high observers could not see it, British fighter planes turned away the reconnaissance and bomber planes which had occasioned the alarm. But machine gun and cannon fire were heard in central London.

Thousands of firemen, air raid wardens, and gunners—the front fighters of this war—rushed to their posts after a weary night during which, authoritative quarters said, 159 German bombers dropped some "very heavy" demolition bombs on the center of the city.

In spite of the terrific blasting millions of weary workmen, clerks and business men struggled back to their daily tasks this morning through traffic jams created by necessary rerouting of buses and taxicabs.

A British communique said today the raiders showered the bombs at random "without any distinction of objectives" and abandoning "all pretense" of confining the attacks to military targets.

The Bank of England, London bridge, the big law courts, and the financial district all are within a few blocks in the midcity area shaken by the thunderour explosions.

A member of the staff of St. Paul's cathedral said the big-domed church escaped damage, and "not a window cracked." For a time the cathedral was menaced by bomb-started fires, he reported, but the wind blew flames the other way.

Hundreds of firemen were engaged in keeping the flames from bombed warehouses from spreading. They ignored the falling bombs and crashing debris as they battled for eight hours without a break to check the flames.

Outlying sections and densely populated residential districts also were bombed heavily. The communique said no count of the dead and injured in the nine hour and two minute attack was possible immediately, but that 286 were killed and 1,400 injured seriously in the Sunday night attack.

That brought the bombing toll to 592 dead and approximately 2,700 badly hurt, even without the figures for last night when

Bombs Dropped in Northern Suburbs of Berlin By British Fliers.

BERLIN—While German bombers attacked military objectives in London, Berlin experienced a new air raid alarm today as British planes bombed northern suburbs of the German capital.

Air raid warning sirens shrieked in Berlin at 1.45 a m and the all-clear signal sounded 40 minutes later.

An official announcement stated that enemy planes again had penetrated over northern Germany and "dropped bombs on various places, including some northern suburbs of Berlin." The statement added:

"A number of apartment houses became the victims of deliberate enemy attacks on non-military objectives."

The same announcement said that German bomber units continued retaliatory attacks on Britain during the night, bombing import-

Knudsen Reports Large Expansion Of Plane Plants

BUFFALO, N. Y.—(UP)—William S. Knudsen, of the national defense commission, completing with Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, a tour of the nation's military aircraft plants, said today that he now was convinced that the United States could build not only the best but the most planes of any nation in the world.

He predicted that a year from now American aviation plants would be turning out 900 military planes a month with a planned peak of 3,000 a month in July, 1942. The present schedule called for 33,000 planes by April 1, 1942 19,000 for the U. S. and 14,000 for Britain.

"I have seen a tremendous amount of expansion take place in an extremely short time," Knudsen said, summing up the results of his tour. "We have advanced from employment of a few hundred men to thousands.

"One fact is outstanding. Everywhere we have found that the quality required in our product is all right. There has been no evidence of a decline in quality despite this rapid expansion."

Defense Program Contracts Prepared By Army And Navy

WASHINGTON (AP) War and navy departments prepared today to place the remaining orders in the $10,000,000,000 defense program to provide the nation with a two-ocean navy, a mechanized army of 1,200,000 men and a combined air force of 35,000 planes.

The rearmament program received its biggest shot in the arm yesterday when President Roosevelt signed the $5,251,000,000 second supplemental defense appropriation bill The army program is expected to speed ahead immediately, the navy program may be months getting underway because of lack of building facilities

Acting with wartime tempo national defense officials reported the following developments within 24 hours after the last of the more than $10,000,000,000 outlay became available

1—The navy awarded an all-time—peace or war—record of contracts for 200 warships and one auxiliary craft, which ultimately will cost $3,861,053,312. These ships will provide a two-ocean navy of 688 fighting ships—more than the combined navies of Japan, Italy, Germany and Soviet Russia.

2—Virtual completion by the navy of contracts for 2,400 of the 10,000 aircraft by 1942 Contracts for the 2,400 planes costing about $168,000,000 may be announced later this week

Mussolini Deplores Blacks

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

We of a democracy often wonder how the dictators can find times to attend to so many chores. Take Signor Mussolini, for example. When he's not pontificating from his balcony about the reincarnation of the Roman empire, or having his photograph taken in bellicose poses, he has time to give to the subject of ladies' pants.

He doesn't like them. "When a woman is persuaded to put on pants, she forfeits her femininity," he argues. And like other dictators, Mussolini likes women plenty feminine. Il Duce wants more and more soldiers for cannon fodder, if the Roman empire is to be revived. He says they'll be needing more and more cannon fodder for the next twenty or thirty years.

But he's after bigger and better bambinos, to be drilled, taught to shoot, help to create his dream of a new Roman empire. But if the Italian signorinas are going to take to slacks, they forfeit the appearance of femininity and who will marry them, wails the Duce?

Women to be wooed and won must create an aura of womanliness, or, as we term it in our blunt American way, they must suggest sex appeal. When discussing the subject of slacks, the Italian dictator seems to have guessed right. In these garments ninety-nine women out of a hundred look decidedly unfeminine. But the feminine argument on the subject is "other women wear them, why shouldn't I?"

Mussolini wears pants himself, and yet if he has done any extensive reading concerning the ancient Romans, whom he so greatly admires, he must know that writers of that period were fond of ascribing the decadence of the time and the crumbling of the empire to the influence of pants.

Clad in their streaming togas, the noble Romans were indeed a sight to see. And no present-day matron with a thickening waistline worked harder to keep down the tell-tale adipose than Romans when Rome was mistress of the world. But when pants began to put in an appearance under the decadent Emperor Heliogabalus, the Romans scorned them as a feminizing innovation from the Oriental provinces, and the fight between toga and pants was on.

Pants seemed to have won the day, and you know the fate of ancient Rome. Mussolini, who has done everything to promote marriage among young Italians, even going to the extent of paying for two-day honeymoons from the provinces to Rome, then stepping out on his balcony to greet them and urging them to be fruitful, is taking this question of slacks sadly to heart.

Even for the sake of a free wedding tour, a normal man might hesitate before falling in love with a woman wearing slacks. Please remember there is no divorce in Italy, or, at least, there was not until a very short time ago. But whether slacks may open the road to divorce and a man's plea to have his matrimonial bonds severed on such justifiable grounds as a slack-wearing wife, remains to be seen.

Who knows, perhaps slacks worn by Italian women are a subtle defensive measure. Perhaps they don't want to marry, in spite of pressure put upon them by the state. Italian women have plenty of character and brains. Producing sons for cannon fodder may not appeal to them.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"THE LORD knows she has enough to confess," Lillian said caustically.

"You never said a truer word," Katherine added. "Dickey will have his ears filled if she spills everything."

"Do you suppose," I faltered, "that the suicidal impulses Miss Whitlock is watching, might include?—"

"Might include trying to yank the Dicky-bird along with her to the Never-never land?" she asked roughly. "She might, at that, but what does it matter as long as she hasn't the well-known ghost of a chance to pull off anything like that?"

"You're sure?" I persisted, and Lillian settled herself to argument

"Just look at the chances for and against her being able to harm him," she said; and began to emphasize her points upon the palm of one hand with the tapping forefinger of the other.

"Firstly," she said. "Ede's weak and emaciated.

"Secondly, Miss Whitlock undoubtedly has gone over her and the room with a fine tooth comb, so she hasn't any lethal weapon handy.

"Thirdly, Dicky is unusually quick and strong, able to cope with a dangerous masculine maniac if he had to, and surely in no danger from Ede."

She paused and looked at me searchingly.

"I haven't convinced you," she said ruefully.

"My reason, yes," I said quickly. "And you have comforted me a lot."

"That's so much to the good," she said, and Katherine spoke quickly and with emphasis.

"There's one thing that's going to be settled right now," she said sternly, and there was a flash of comprehension in Lillian's eyes.

"I know, and I'm with you," she said, and Katherine went on.

"I grant you everything Lil's said, about Ede's weakness, and the fine tooth comb, and, of course, Dicky doesn't run the slightest risk even if he sees her and hears her 'confession'—whatever it is—alone, as Ede no doubt will ask. A word of caution to him to watch out for her will be all that's needed. But I'm raring up on my hind feet right now to declare that if Ede has any yen to see you alone for confession, or anything else, she'll have to keep right on yearning. You're not going to see her alone."

She paused for breath on the ultimatum, then went swiftly on again.

"You may have Dicky with you," she conceded, "or Miss Whitlock or Lil, or me, no use letting anybody else in on it—but you don't see her unless a third person is right beside you. Women in her nervous condition develop surprising strength sometimes, and while Dicky would be able to handle her easily, you might not, and you're not going to take the chance."

"Second the motion firmly and vigorously," Lillian chimed in. "D'ya hear us?" She turned on me threateningly.

"I couldn't very well help it," I returned with a faint smile, for their strenuous championship heartened me as it always does. Never did women have more faithful friends than these two, who have so often aided me with such loving loyalty. "And I'll try to be reasonable."

Love Gives Sense of Security

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

A few children, even at a late age, are smothered with mother-love. But these cases are relatively rare. Most babies and little children are starving for want of expression of affection from the mother and father.

Some twenty years ago, mothers were warned to leave the baby alone, not to pick him up, not to fondle, cuddle or caress him, and to handle him as little as possible. And, as for holding a tot on the lap, that was taboo. Then there appeared an orgy of writing and speaking by "child-experts" in which the child with a "mother-fixation" was constantly described and given a dark, unhappy future, and pictured as the average child.

By and by most "intelligent" mothers began to think themselves a menace to the youngster just because of their love for him. Desperately they began to keep themselves from showing him affection in order to save him from the damage they might do by being normal. And when a mother forgot herself and petted her baby or young child she was punished with a sense of guilt.

Grandmother knew better. She fondled, kissed and cuddled her baby when she pleased. Nor did she hesitate to hold the toddler on her lap. She never spurned his show of affection nor was he denied hers. While in the midst of house work, if the baby or tot grew noticeably peevish or stubborn, she dropped her work, picked him up, told or read him stories, or soothed him in some other way. Often this treatment was the very thing he needed. However, she was too busy to spoil him with too much attention. Yet the little time she had was full of heart-expression, through which the youngster was reassured that he wanted, worthy and secure.

Eminent psychiatrists like Dr. Plant and Dr. David Levy have recently been telling how important early cuddling experiences are in making for security.

In that recent splendid book, "Parents and Children Go to school," by Dorothy Walter Baruch, Ph.D. (Scott, Foresman) we read:

"When a mother nurses her baby lovingly and quietly and peacefully, the baby is held close and gains a feeling of being warmly wanted and secure. In this case the mother does not need to think about giving her baby enough physical closeness; she automatically does it during the nursing periods. But many mothers today do not nurse their babies for any length of time during infancy. The babies do not have the nursing periods as a source of physical contact." Then she recommends for the bottle baby "at least one or two periods a day especially reserved for being held and fondled by his mother, away from other people."

Many of the pathetic, listless, or tense and unstable children who arrive in the preschool have histories such as this. Inquiry brings to light that the mother has carefully avoided any cuddling and that she feels guilty over what cuddling she has done.

Let mothers with bottle-fed babies hold these babies as they take the bottle. In a number of hospitals nurses are doing just this thing, and with the purpose of providing the baby with some cuddling.

A list of books and pamphlets for expectant parents may be had by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. Also a list of books and pamphlets on bringing up the baby and young child.

Following normal bidding up to the higher levels, why should South ultimately bid 6-Diamonds instead of 6-No Trumps on this rubber bridge deal?

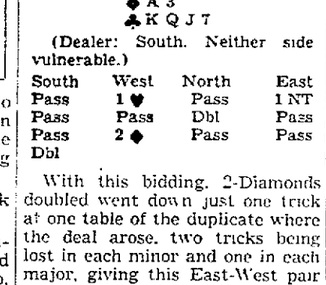
CARE PAYS DIVIDENDS

ADVANCED players keep opening bids of one open with very little in their hands to protect the opportunity of the side if the original call had been on a holding almost justifying a two bid to guarantee game strength. If it turns out that the first hand was barely a minimum, the side still may profit by its being kept open, even against aggressive opponents if real care is used in treating the situations that develop.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 NT
Pass	Pass	Dbl	Pass
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	Pass
Dbl

With this bidding, 2-Diamonds doubled went down just one trick at one table of the duplicate where the deal arose, two tricks being lost in each minor and one in each major, giving this East-West pair a whale of a big top score for their way of the table; down only one trick doubled, for a cost of merely 100 points.

At another table, where East kept it open with 1-No Trump, North doubled and South passed it, but West did not have the wisdom to take out into 2-Diamonds That pair was set three tricks at 1-No Trump doubled, costing 500 points, taking only one trick in each suit.

In one case the bidding was as given above except that South, instead of doubling the 2-Diamonds, called 2-Spades, North 2-No Trumps, South 3-Spades and North 4-Spades. Where East did not bid at all, South bid his spades and the side easily reached 4-Spades, made in every case with the loss of one trick in spades, one in hearts and one in clubs.

Don't Neglect Your Neck

By MME. QUI VIVE

Give your neck a peek-see. Take a double mirror and observe what's going on at the back of it. While you may not be much of a freckle collector you may find a colony of yaller polka dots just abaft the nape line. It is a favorite spot for discolorations left by sunburn. The skin isn't always of good texture there. And believe it or curl up your supercilious nose, but blackheads have been known to settle there. Little girls who are not demon neck washers often have them.

No forward-looking woman fails to take a back survey now and then. It is as important to look neat going as well as coming. The grandest gift you can make a woman is a full-length triple mirror. She sees herself as others see her, may become aware of beauty defects that have never been apparent to her and which can be corrected.

As the rear of the neck is unseen, it is untended. The creamy cosmetic that is patted into the face at bedtime may extend down over the throat, but it never gets past the ears. Too bad. The throat should have plenty of creaming, patting and frictions with ice because it is there that many a woman first displays evidence that she's not exactly 16 any more. Necks wrinkle, become discolored, get flabby; the penalty one pays for not inviting the neck to the cosmetic feasts.

There is not much joy in the possession of a face that has kept within finger touch of youth if it is held up by a neck that has gone to seed. That good old slogan "Keep up your chin" should be pasted on the mirror of every woman whose neck is bent on self destruction. A perfectly balanced head makes a woman appear distinguished; and how the head is held is something about which the average woman thinks not at all.

If you are a neck worrier, trot-trot to the beauty shop and get yourself a jar of massage cream. Cold cream delightful for cleansing and soothing purposes, won't do, it lets fingers slip.

After using soap and water at night and drying thoroughly, palm in the emollient. Tilt the chin slightly, but don't have the neck muscles tense. Rub up and down from collar bones to chin with flattened fingers, from shoulders to ears, from the upper part of the back to the nape

Spread the fingers along the jaw lines, iron upward with the thumbs. Use fingers and thumbs as if they were little hammers, going over the entire skin surface. Lower the head and slap the back of the neck briskly.

Let the cream remain on. Wring a small towel out of ice water, place around the neck, cover with a dry towel and go to bed. Soon the flesh will be steaming hot, showing that the blood streams have got the SOS and are coming to your aid.

CHAPTER XIV

"Youand Ted will have fun working it out together."

No struggles ahead. That's what every one thought and said. Their lives, Alan and hers, as smooth and as unbending as a new straight road. No struggle except the conflict in her mind and heart over Norman who would leave neither, who refused to be driven out.

She did not know that Ellen was sitting up until Ellen said rather breathlessly, "Well, look who's with us! Edwina Burke and . . . isn't it Norman Alexander? You know him, Carol. Is it he?" Then she said, laughing low, "I'd be quite willing to have my car smashed if he were the one to do the smashing . . ."

Carol lay still, the thick fair lashes quivering. Then slowly she sat up looking about her, seeing Norman, a strong brown figure in dark trunks, and Edwina in a white bathing suit that was as if molded in the slim agile body. Edwina was taking off her white cap and was shaking her abundant dark hair loose. And she and Norman were laughing at their inability to light cigarets with wet hands.

As Carol saw him, he saw her and with a rush of feelings Norman's face was blurred to her and she saw only his fine body and his wet black hair carelessly pushed back. She did not know even if he smiled but she saw Edwina give her a gay little salute and then, slipping her bare feet into clogs, get up and pick her way across the bodies of half a dozen sun-worshippers.

"Hello," Edwina said cheerfully. "Have you any matches? Our are soaked and Norman's lighter is empty."

"We've plenty of matches."

And when she was holding dry matches in her hand she said, "I don't blame you for swimming here rather than at the club. It's a thousand times better. And after being in New York, it's divinely cool here. Awfully glad to know you, Miss Thomas. Thanks for the matches, Carol."

When she left, Ellen said, "She never looks any older, does she? She looks sixteen and never been kissed. That's the first time I've ever been so close to her. Has she been in New York with him, do you suppose?"

"Yes."

"She would pick out the best-looking and most eligible young man who's been in Newton for many a day. I'll bet the other girls out in the Hills are burning up. But you can't blame him, can you? She's got everything."

"I like Edwina. No . . .' I can't blame him." But it hurts! It shouldn't but it does. It hurts more than anything has ever hurt me . . .

Ellen Thomas frowned. "Carol why don't you swim at the club? Most girls would give their right arms for the chance and yet you still come out here, a public place."

"I don't know anybody out there. I don't feel that I belong."

"You will. As Alan's wife, you'll belong anywhere you care to. Nothing is going to keep him down. All the right doors will be opened."

"Alan doesn't particularly like the club, Ellen. He'd rather swim here."

"Because of Edwina?"

"Maybe. I really don't know." She thought: All the things I was so sure about I'm not sure about any more. I know only that I am but a few yards from Norman, from his touch that changed my whole world and that made me for a little while happier than I have ever been, and since then desolate.

Yes, Edwina's return had thrown a queer light into a future she had thought perfectly charted. No longer were Alan's aspirations clearly defined, for she found herself puzzled at his wish for a pretentious wedding and at his determination to build a house larger than any she had dreamed of and one which she felt they could not afford. He who had been simple and modest spoke of his certainty of a brilliant future. It was as if he suddenly felt reins of power in his hands and Carol wondered with whom he had been associating and what had influenced him to think along lines heretofore totally unlike him. Alan a snob, stuffed with his own importance, heeding the smooth talk of politicians who saw in his humble beginning, the clear brilliance of his mind and his fine appearance convenient tools? She could not believe it.

As her mind groped to understand, it occurred to her that perhaps only recently, when she had known she had never loved him but only admired him, had she seen him in his true light. Yet in his attitude to her he was the same, sweet and considerate, a boy to whom she was irrevocably bound.

When she turned her head and saw Alan coming toward her, she saw that his smile for her was erased when he noticed Edwina and Norman. Dropping between Ellen and her, he turned his back upon Edwina and Norman. After Ellen had pleaded an apointment with the hairdresser, Carol said, "I picked some flowers for Mr. Hartley before I left today, Alan. He can't see them now, I know, but he'll be aware of their fragrance." This was the way it should be.

Alan and she together, and over there Edwina and Norman together. And it was the way it was! Oh, but why, why? She felt then that no price would have been too dear if only she could get up and go to Norman, just to see him and speak with him and hear his laughter . . .

"That was sweet of you, Carol," Alan said.

Sweet, was it? As Alan's wife she would always do the proper, conventional things. That was the way it should be, too!

When Alan suggested a swim, she put on the tight blue rubber cap, followed him down the small frail pier to the deep water and dived in. Side by side they swam out to the raft and climbed on it. Edwina and Norman, she saw now, had left. Glancing away from the spot where they had been, she looked at Alan whose eyes caught her glance.

While mischievous boys tried to sink the raft, Carol thought that Alan looked as guilty as she.

Located in the old ugly section of Newton, the hardware store was still known as "Mr. Hartley's." On hot summer nights other keepers of small shops along the street sat on the sidewalk in straight little chairs while their children played and skipped rope on a street quiet by night but teeming with commerce by day. As Alan's car stopped before the hardware store, the first floor dark, the second lighted faintly, a mixture of languages came to Carol as the shopkeepers gossiped and fanned themselves.

"This is a dreadful place for a blind old man to live, Alan."

He smiled at her. "He's too stingy to better his living conditions although he got a big price for the store. People from all over town still come here. It's an institution, a landmark. We don't stay long."

The opening of a small narrow door at the right of the store revealed steep narrow steps. Alan pressed his finger to the bell and then used his flashlight to guide them up the steps where a kindly-looking old colored man waited for them. Carol gave him the large bouquet and he disappeared to find a vase for them.

Old furniture cluttered the sitting room, which would have been stifling without the faint coolness stirred by an electric fan. The room was scrupulously clean as was the bent, wrinkled old man sitting in a deep and worn upholstered chair.

At the sound of voices he asked, feebly, "Is that you, Alan, my boy?"

"Yes, Mr. Hartley. And I've brought Miss Tallant to see you."

Mr. Hartley extended a shaking hand which Carol took firmly in hers.

"Alan has told me so much about you, Mr. Hartley."

"Has he?" He chuckled. "Has he told you I'm a dreadful old codger and a miser?"

"Nothing as bad as that." The light blue eyes looking up seemed to see her. The fringe of white around the bald pink skull gave him the appearance of a fun-loving clown.

"Have you found Miss Tallant a chair, Alan?"

"Yes, sir."

"Jake has fixed some lemonade. That'll cool us." Then he sat back in his chair, folded his hands and smiled. "I've found a better place for my money than spending it on myself, young lady. Being blind, I can see more beauty than any of you because I don't see anything ugly. People tell me I should have a house in the country, but how would my neighbors come to see me? Three generations I have known on this street and they come to see me and bring me things. And the children! I'd miss the little children. I have lived here for sixty years and my friends don't forget me. The little boys I knew are men—judges and doctors and lawyers."

When Jake came in with the flowers, the old man sniffed with pleasure. "Flowers! Thank you Miss Tallant. By me, Jake, where I can touch them. Thank you . . . He chuckled again. "If I had my life to live over, I'd be a florist. The lemonade, Jake. Big glasses. . ."

Mt. Gilead Woman Killed; Truck Plunges Into Creek

VICTIM PINNED IN WRECKAGE AFTER MISHAP

Home Management Supervisor Dies at Bucyrus; Trucker Hurt Near Loudonville.

One person was dead today and another was injured in two traffic accidents in the Mansfield area in the past 24 hours.

Fatally injured when the car she was driving collided with another machine at a crossroads near Upper Sandusky yesterday was Mrs. Veva Batton, 26, of Mt. Gilead.

Mrs. Batton, home management supervisor of the Farm Security Administration office at Upper Sandusky died in Bucyrus City hospital shortly after 8 p. m. yesterday without regaining consciousness.

Authorities said she suffered a fractured pelvis and internal injuries when pinned beneath her machine as it rolled over after colliding with another automobile.

Mrs. Batton is survived by her husband, Forrest, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Friend Wilson, of Summerfield.

Wilbur T. Kirk, 33, of 127 East Arch street, is in the Mansfield General hospital suffering from a head concussion received last night when the truck he was driving plunged down a 12-foot embankment into a creek near Loudonville.

Hospital authorities reported his condition as "good" today.

Authorities said Kirk's truck loaded with three and a half tons of scrap metal struck the end of a one-way bridge on the Honeycreek road and rolled end over end down the embankment.

Kirk was taken to physician's office in Loudonville by a passing motorist. He was given first aid treatment and then brought to Mansfield.

Officers reported that a bird dog, riding on the seat with Kirk miraculously escaped injury. The animal was taken to the home of Lawrence Cline near Loudonville.

President Leaves Free Radio Time Up To Networks

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt began work today on a major address which may establish a precedent affecting the question of free radio time for himself and Wendell L. Willkie during the campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt speaks from 9:30 to 10 p. m. (EST) Wednesday night in Washington before the convention of the International Brotherhood of the Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers (AFL).

Ignoring Republican protests that the president is receiving free radio time for addresses which are actually campaign speeches, the White House would give no intimation whether Mr. Roosevelt's speech would be political or non-political.

As a consequence, the networks which will transmit the address to the nation, will not be obliged to make any prior commitment to give Willkie the same amount of free radio time.

Mr. Roosevelt's press secretary, Stephen T. Early, informed the networks that the president would speak at the appointed hour, but made no request or suggestion that it be broadcast, saying by inference, that they could broadcast it or not as they chose. But, as a matter of policy, the networks broadcast all speeches of the president, whereas political candidates must pay for their time. Thus Early required the broadcasters to make the distinction between president and candidate themselves.

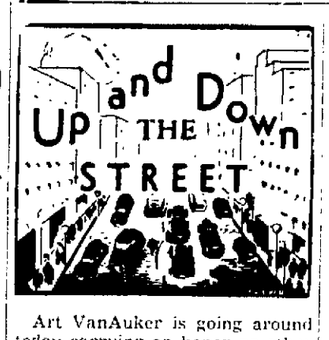
Bricker Avoids Clash on Davey Charges



Art VanAuker is going around today carrying an honor no other Mansfield golfer ever held. Playing in a threesome with Ted Etzel and Ray Oak at Possum Run yesterday Art marked up a "deuce" on No. 16, a par-4 hole. The hole is 334 yards long. VanAuker, who finished with a 75, sent his tee shot to the direction flag half way to the green and then used a No. 2 iron and sank his second shot. It was the first "deuce" 'ever scored on the hole.

Deciding that she needed a skeleton key for one of the doors in her apartment one of the city's newer brides yesterday went to a local "dime store" and bought two keys. She took them back to her place of employment to try them out. Her boss, who used to be a hardware dealer, noticed that she was having difficulty getting the key to work so he volunteered assistance. Net result: the lock became jammed and the bride watched her employer spend most of the afternoon taking the door off its hinges to remove the key. When she got the key home it worked nicely, of course.

Mansfield Hi-Y clubs had a reason to be proud of themselves this morning. A few years ago the Hi-Y got together a booklet which put forth the purpose of the Hi-Y and established a code of ethics for Hi-Y members. A copy of the booklet was sent to a number of clubs and the comment on it was so great that the national council of Hi-Y clubs decided to use the booklet in clubs throughout the country. News of the decision was received here today. H. D. Bishop was adviser to the Hi-Y club when the booklet was written.

At last, persons visiting in Mansfield who want to find their own way around can now get a city map at newsstands. The maps, drawn to scale and marked with 60 points of interest here, are a Mansfield product too. They were drawn and published by Roy Antibus, former city engineer, who retired from active service last year.

SAYS DECENCY PROVIDES ONLY ISSUE IN RACE

Compares Government Record With That of Rival In Radio Address.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—A plan to ignore so far as possible the campaign charges of his Democratic opponent, Martin L. Davey, apparently became the strategy of Governor Bricker today in making his own case for re-election.

Bricker's first in a series of weekly campaign radio speeches indicated that he would try to persuade the voters to compare the records of his own and Davey's administrations and not to engage in an exchange of accusations.

"The state campaign this year has only one major issue," Bricker said. "That issue is decency in government."

The governor did not take the trouble to reply to Davey's accusation that an "elaborate shakedown" had developed in the liquor control department. In this connection it was noted that when the Democratic charges are sufficiently broad as to require an answer, Bricker has been delegating some subordinate official to reply.

This was done in the case of the liquor department when an "administrative assistant" sought to refute the Davey charges. The same technique has been employed on other occasions. Bricker has strongly indicated that he himself will not directly become involved with his campaign foe. Many Republicans recognize Davey's ability in a slashing political attack and they believe it blunts his blows to let his remarks go unchallenged except for issuing a formal denial through some responsible departmental official.

In his radio speech last night Bricker recalled an attack upon Davey by the Democrats two years ago as proof of the recognized need for a change then.

"There need be no suspicion in the mind of any voters as to where the opposing candidates for governor stand on the question of good government," he said. "On that point, the record is clear. It is a record made during the time both candidates have served as governor of Ohio. The record of each candidate cannot be obscured by name calling, mud slinging and other low types of political demagogy.

"That is only evidence of the same mental and moral decay that debauched the state government for four years. The records of both candidates as governor shall give a complete answer to glowing promises for the future. No amount of form letters, paid advertising, paid workers, can erase the records which have already been made. I invite the attention of every voter to these records."

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

MISS MIDNIGHT'S DIARY.

Dear Diary: Sometimes I wonder what the goings-on of cafe society would sound like if they were broadcast in an informal running commentary to an unseen audience of ordinary plain citizens in places like Milwaukee, Fort Worth, Cleveland, Cheyenne, and Boise, Idaho. Would the people who'd never seen Lois Andrew or Brenda Frazier or Tommy Manville be bored or amused, titillated or scandalized; would they think the gilded set fascinating or funny?

Suppose for instance, I'd brought a microphone instead of a notebook to the Playhouse the other night. The listening audience would have heard: "Here's the first opening night of the season—the premiere of 'Kind Lady.' A revival, with Grace George. Down there on the left of the house is Helen Hayes, with Charlie MacArthur, her husband. Miss Hayes is wearing a white street dress with black lace butterflies printed all over it, and her little black hat sets on the back of her head. Down the aisle swings Major Bowes, walking beside a lass who is wearing more ermine than anybody else in the theater. Somehow, the girl with Major Bowes always seems to be wearing a lot of ermine.

The blond with the long mane of taffy-colored hair sitting in the second row center is Tallulah Bankhead, back from a long tour of the cowbarn circuit, during which I will wager she did not see a single cow. She is looking very chic and dressier than usual in a red and white candy-striped dinner frock; usually Tallulah floats around the Stork club in just a simple shirtwaist affair—this chic must be in honor of Grace George.

"Both Miss Hayes and Tallulah are wonderful audiences. They are quiet and polite and appreciative, and when the play is over they sit in their seats and applaud until the final curtain has come down; during intermissions they do not jive around putting on acts of their own, as frequently happens with lady visitors from the cinema.

"William Wyler, the Hollywood director, is out on the sidewalk smoking a cigaret when he notices a beautiful blond girl coming out of the theater. 'Who is that?' he asks. His eyes are popping out of his head as if he did not come from a town where there are as many beautiful girls as there are lamp posts. He is told that she is Patricia Garfield, who has been working as a model. Has she ever done any acting?' he asks. And from the expression of interest on Mr. Wyler's face it looks as though she might be doing some acting in the future.

"After the opening we dash over to Fefe's Cafe Pierre, where the lights are dimming and Mili Monti, the Continental singer, is coming out in a white dress to thrill. While she is singing 'If You Leave Paris' we spot Jimmy Dunn, the screen actor, who has come to town to play in the new Cole Porter musical 'Panama Hattie.' He is talking to Elaine Shepard, who was picked last year by James Montgomery Flagg as the current most perfect model. Looking at her is James McKinley Bryant, and although history proves that this is not true, Mr. Bryant is looking at Miss Shepard as though she were the first girl he'd ever met.

"Vic Orsatti, the dream boy of the Hollywood agents, has wandered in alone, which is flash news in any cafe. Frank Shields, the tennis player, has dropped in by himself, too. Frank was put out of play at Forest Hills, and the whispers of his set are loud to the effect that he is out of the matrimonial play, as well . . .

"Over at a ringside table, confounding the rumorers, sit Betty Lawford and Ted Husing. Betty looks extremely pretty in a black dress with a sheer white ruff and cuffs, and Ted is looking extremely jovial.

"The Honorable Brindsley-Plunkett is sitting at another ringside mushroom talking in French with a handsome refugee, and saying something that sounds like 'Let's go over to Spivy's for a drink.' The face which just peeked into the doorway belongs to Lady Patricia Latham. She is just back from Newport and that thing slung over her shoulder is a portable radio.

Well, by now the listening audience (if they are still listening) in Boise, Cheyenne, Cleveland, etc., has become acquainted, auricularly at least, with a scattering of theater folk, nobility, Broadwayites, and assorted habitues of fashionable bar rooms, so it is time to take them to the Stork club, which is where people from Boise, Cheyenne, Cleveland, etc., always want to go.

"There's Brenda Frazier sitting at a table in the corner by the glass wall that separates the diners from the dance band. She is with Shipwreck Kelly and she is wearing a simple black dress and one gardenia and a few gold bracelets on her left wrist. It is odd to see Brenda just sitting through an evening talking, not dancing, because she used to be the most tireless and enthusiastic conga fiend on the Stork club floor. Now she is seen to dance rarely if at all, and observers have deduced that Mr. Kelly doesn't care for terpischore, because Brenda gave up dancing when she took up Mr. Kelly.

"Major Bowes is at a large ringside table, giving an after-the-opening party in honor of Grace George, the star of the show. Miss George is wearing a tight black dinner dress and a dark red suede hat shaped like a dise over her right eye. She is getting up to dance, and as she pirouettes around the dance floor she carries a hanky in her hand. Ely Culbertson relaxes at a banquet, Orson Munn smokes a pipe and chats with Lawrence Schwab, and Tommy Manville confides: 'I saw Brenda in 21 the other day. I asked her how to propose to a rich girl like her and she said, "Me marry you?" I said, 'Why not? I can't go through life without marrying a fifth wife!'"

That's all, brother.

DENTISTS TOLD OF ARMY PLANS

Corps to Be Expanded From 500 to 3,000 Officers Starting Monday.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—Dentists attending the American Dental Association's convention here today heard the U. S. army will start Monday expanding its dental corps from 500 to 3,000 officers.

Brig. Gen. Leigh C. Fairbank, chief of staff of the corps, said the full complement needed in the national defense training program is expected to be reached by next April 1.

The 4,600 officers in the dental reserve corps will be drawn upon first, he reported.

Dentists of military age who do not volunteer will be subject to the draft. These would be privates and would not practice dentistry while serving as such. Applications for commissions would be considered later, however, he explained.

He endorsed these defense committee recommendations:

Sending questionnaires to every registered dentist to assemble data on the profession's ability to serve the country's needs;

Cooperation with the surgeons general of the army to reduce rejections for military service because of dental defects;

Distribution of courses in military dentistry now being prepared by the war department.

Snyder Unveils Tyger Football Machine at Stadium Field Friday

Mansfield High Coach Optimistic About Club; Akron West Is First Foe.

By CHARLES MARTIN, News-Journal Sports Editor.

COACH PAUL SNYDER will unveil his 1940 Mansfield Tyger football edition at 8 p. m. Friday at Stadium field when the Akron West Cowboys invade Mansfield for a tussle under the floodlights.

The Tyger-Cowboy contest is one of four games on tap for fans in this vicinity as King Football takes over the sports front.

In neighboring Bellville, the Bluejays, who suffered a lone defeat last season, will tackle LaRue. The Bellville club will be playing its first game under Coach C. L. Lindsay, who replaced Boyd Hodge. Hodge went to Westerville high school.

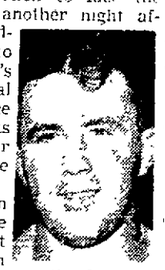
At Crestline, Coach Merle Hutson, battling to protect the eight-game winning streak compiled by the Onondagas in 1939, sends his proteges against Mt. Gilead under the arcs.

* * *

In the other games, Tiffin Calvert invades Galion to face the Orangemen in another night affray, and Willard treks to Ashland. Galion's North Central Ohio conference team makes its debut under Coach Clarence Mackley.



Snyder

The Madison Rams, facing one of their toughest schedules, launch their season by traveling to Wooster Saturday. Coach Al Fendrick is seeking reserve strength to help his regulars.

But to get back to the Tygers. Only three seasoned veterans return to form the backbone of the team and Snyder is optimistic.

"We face what stacks up now as a 'suicide' schedule and I'm not predicting anything," Snyder said today.

"As far as I can see now we'll have a 'fair' team, but don't expect too much of the squad. The players are inexperienced and some of the combines we face are loaded with veterans.

"At present there are two positions wide open to any youth trying out for berths. It looks like a battle between Martin Henke and Adam Brandt for the fullback post, while Ed Arlen and Bill Pecht are waging a heetic fight for one of the tackle spots."

Out at Madison Fendrick is anything but enthusiastic. He needs several important replacements and is relying on his sophomore and freshmen talent to fill the gaps left by graduation.

Not much is known about the Akron West team, but you may be sure it will put up a battle against the Tygers in a game during which the new lighting system will be dedicated. All seats for the game are reserved.

* *

Shelby, out to regain the gridiron glory it won in 1938 when it finished the season unbeaten but tied, will send a fast combine against Norwalk. The Whippets are small, however, only averaging around the 150-pound mark.

Season Ticket Books on Sale at Four Stores.

Demand for season ticket books for the Mansfield High Tyger football games today caused Senior high officials to place the books on sale at the Central Drug store. The books, good for the five home night games, are worth $3, but if purchased before the season opens they may be purchased for $2.50. Junior high school students seeking tickets for the opening game against Akron West at the Stadium Friday night may secure them at their respective school and Brown's Drug store. The student tickets are 15 cents. Books may also be purchased at Yuncker Sports, Tawse Drug, and Mansfield Athletic Supply.

Sox Win, Send Indians Down; Walters Hurls

Cincy Out to Annex Title In Impressive Fashion; Play Two Games.

(By Associated Press)

BOSTON — Among jubilant Rhinelanders is it just a question now of whether the Cincinnati Reds breeze to their second straight National league pennant or win by a narrow margin as they did last year in nosing out the St. Louis Cardinals.

* * *

In a doubleheader today, the Reds hoped to expand their lead at the expense of the Boston Bees.

Bucky Walters, seeking his 19th decision, was down to hurl the lid-lifter with Johnny Vander Meer, gunning for his second straight victory on the comeback trail, called for the nightcap. Bill Posedel and Manuel Salvo were to go for Boston.

The idle Reds' lead was boosted another half length to seven games yesterday as the New York Giants defeated the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Reds will cinch the pennant in a tangle with the Dodgers during the present eastern tour if they follow tradition.

The Reds froze their two previous flags, in 1919 and 1939, by defeating the runner-up clubs.

They knocked off the second-place Giants in the deciding game of 1919 and last year with Paul Derringer whiffed Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize on six pitched balls to end the game eliminating the second-place Cardinals.

If the Reds win only 11 and lose 12 of their remaining games Brooklyn must win 18 and lose but three to win the pennant.

* * *

During their day off the Reds' chief topic of discussion was the hectic American league race. A few members of the Cincinnati club, including Ernie Lombardi, want to see the Yankees win to get another chance at them but most of the Reds are pulling for Cleveland.

Mrs. Leopold Adams Cops Women's Title at Club.

The 1940 Women's golf championship at the Possum Run golf club today was the property of Mrs. Leopold Adams. Mrs. Adams won the title over the week-end by defeating Mrs. Faye Strome. This marks the first time in three years that the title has not gone to Mrs. Thelma Linster. Mrs. Linster withdrew from this year's competition.

Chicago Hands Cleveland 2-1 Beating as Lee Gives Up Four Hits.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — The torrid American league race is wound up like a seven-day clock but those amazing New York Yankees hope to do something about it at the Cleveland Indians' expense today.

* * *

The Bombers were set to face Bob Feller, pitching ace of the fading Tribesmen, in the opener of a two-game series.

Twenty-four victories in 30 starts have sounded the alarm to their rivals that the Yanks are driving for their fifth straight flag. They are only a game to the rear of the Detroit Tigers and a half game behind the Indians.

Ernie Bonham, rookie right-hander who has reeled off four straight triumphs for the Yanks, was slated to make his first start today against the Indians.

The impotent Tribesmen obtained only four hits off the southpaw slants of their old teammate, Thornton Lee, yesterday as the White Sox won, 2 to 1. The result knocked the Indians out of first place after four weeks and represented Cleveland's seventh setback in eight times out.

Lee ganged up with two former Indians, Second-Baseman Jimmy Webb and Outfielder Julius Solters. Solters contributed one of three singles in a fourth-inning outburst off Pitcher Harry Eisenstat.

Webb scored the winning tally in the seventh on Mike Kreevich's single after smacking a two-bagger.

* * *

The Indians made their run after two were out in the last of the seventh. Jeff Heath singled and Keltner doubled him home.

Long Range Rifle Title Up For Decision Today

By FRITZ HOWELL

CAMP PERRY —(AP)—The long range .30 caliber rifle championship of America was up for decision today at the national matches.

A total of 1,498 of the country's top-flight marksmen entered a 20-shot, 1,000-yard event for the Wimbledon cup, placed in competition in 1875 by Princess Louise of England.

The event, won a year ago by Private Alfred L. Wolters of the marines with a perfect score, is open to any rifle, but the majority of the field used the army Springfield.

Another test for the army's new Garand (M-1) semi-automatic rifle also was on today's program. A field of 1,465 entered the Scott trophy event, 20 shots rapid fire prone, at 300 yards with the Springfield bolt action rifle, while 1,012 competed in a 16-shot event over the same course with the new arm.

Yesterday 36 marksmen scored perfect 50's with the Springfield in a 10-shot rapid fire event at 200 yards, while only one had a perfect score over the same distance in a 16-shot Garand match.

The perfect score among the 1,057 M-1 marksmen was turned in by C. L. Swett of Spark, Nev., while the 34 leaders among the 1,502 Springfield riflemen were to shoot off today to determine the winner.

Lieut. Rogardus S. Cairns, cavalryman of Fort Knox, Kentucky, bested a field of 1,341 of the country's best service and civilian marksmen to win the Leech cup with a perfect score of 100 with 15 V's in the 20-shot, 1,000-yard event for the service rifle.

A new world record was set by Maurice W. Lalonde of the Detroit police with a score of 192 in the .38-caliber slow fire pistol event of 20 shots at 50 yards.

MOTORS AND STEELS LEAD MARKET RALLY

Aircrafts Also Assist in Quiet Session Today; Resistance Displayed at Opening.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Steels, motors and aircrafts today led the stock market in a quiet rally.

Selling resistance was displayed at the start and, near the second hour, leaders had retrieved fractions to a point or so of Monday's losses.

While many traders continued to keep commitments tight in view of inconclusive war developments, the majority seemed reluctant to part with holdings.

Market analysts noted the condition statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Sept. 4, disclosing a jump of $17,000,000 in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans and $27,000,000 in loans to brokers and dealers in securities.

While the aggregate of business borrowings throughout the country is now at the highest level since Jan. 12, 1938, it is still some $400,000,000 under the figure of three years ago.

Those studying railway equipment activities for signs of further industrial revival found encouragement in a compilation showing domestic orders for 7,645 freight cars were placed in August, the best total since November last year.

Accountant Hired To Prove County's Overcharge Claim

Richland county commissioners today had employed Carl A. Dallenbaugh, Columbus, to produce figures showing that the county has at least $1,000 coming from the state in overcharges for keeping mental patients in state institutions.

Dallenbaugh, a public accountant, will get $150 if he proves the state owes the county that much. He won't receive anything if he can't prove it, commissioners said.

Dallenbaugh audited county and state books in 1936 and showed the county had $36,000 due from the state in overcharges. A large part of that amount has been credited to the county on bills owed the state.

The audit completed four years ago showed that the state was collecting $5.50 a week for keeping county patients in institutions while the figure set up under a state law was $3.50 a week.

CONFLICTS OVER DRAFT STUDIED

Joint Senate-House Group Seeks Compromise on Conscription.

affairs committee, denied that any pre-conference agreements had been reached. "We approach the problems with an open mind," he said.

Rep. May (D.) Ky. of the house conferees emphatically denied printed reports that he had said he would favor dumping the Fish amendment.

While the senate rejected motions of Sen. Clark (D.) Mo., to instruct conferees to stand by both the 21-30, inclusive, age limit, and the Fish amendment, leaders conceded that the votes meant little.

"I interpreted the action to mean simply that the senate did not want to instruct its conferees," said Sen. Barkley, majority leader.

The administration was reported to favor the 21-44, inclusive age limit, although army officials were said to regard it as relatively unimportant.

"The broader age limit is favored by many because it would permit induction of World war veterans, specialists in many lines needed in a mechanized army, and because the influence of older men would be for the good of all," said Rep. Harter (R) O. "Experience of the World war showed the advantage of older men in companies."

Although the conscription bill was headed to certain passage, foes of the measure continued to issue bitter attacks on it.

Sen. Wheeler (D) Mont. declared that a draft bill, with age limits of 21 to 45, would be used as a club over laboring men in every part of the country. They will be told, he declared, that if they don't behave they will be drafted into the army. He predicted wide resentment against the draft.

Sen. Johnson (D) Col. declared that the Civilian Conservation corps is competing with the army for men. He pointed to a call for CCC enrollees issued by the Denver office.

He said the announcement called for an unlimited number, without regard to whether the youths have dependents, a condition previously favored for CCC enrollees.

As the senate-house conferees met it appeared likely that the final form of the draft bill may be completed during the day. May was optimistic over chances of agreement in a few hours, while Sheppard said that every effort would be made to speed the bill, consistent with fair consideration.

WPA TO CHECK WATER PROJECT JOB SCHEDULES

Take Preliminary Steps To Carry Out $63,000 Line Extension Program.

WPA officials are expected in Mansfield this week to inspect job schedules for a $63,000 water development proposal now in Washington for approval.

City Engineer W. C. Statler said WPA officials were notified yesterday that the job schedules were prepared and ready for approval. He said he was told that officials would come to Mansfield as soon as possible.

The project for which the schedule was prepared, calls for the extension of a high capacity line constructed on Cook road and Lexington avenue two years ago to the mercantile district.

Originally estimated to cost $75,000, the job schedule reveals that the cost will run approximately $12,000 under the first estimates, Statler said.

Total cost is now set up at $63,111, with the city's share figured at $28,879 for materials and the government's share at $34,214 for all of the labor.

Planned As Winter Job

Proposed as a "winter job" for WPA, the project will provide 70 men with employment for a period of about four months.

It calls for construction of a 16-inch main from Blanche street to South Mulberry street, to Glessner street, to Crouse street and Weldon avenue to West Dickson avenue. A 12-inch line will be laid from Weldon avenue to Main street and from Dickson avenue to Fourth street.

The project is part of recommended extensions made three years ago by George B. Gascoyine and company, Cleveland consulting engineers, and also has the approval of the state department of health and the National Board of fire underwriters.

Statler said it was planned to start the project in the Dickson avenue district before cold weather so that streets under which the lines must be laid can be paved rather than left open all winter.

ANSWERS BELL PHONE ACTION

Mansfield Company Declares $1,596 Due It for Tolls Handled by Office.

The Mansfield Telephone company, named recently in a $10,635 judgment suit filed in Richland county common pleas court by the Ohio Bell Telephone company, Cleveland, had filed an answer and cross petition today, asking a judgment for $1,596 against the Ohio Bell company.

The Mansfield firm denies in its answer that it refused to pay the Bell company the amount due for tolls handled here from March 31 to April 20, as charged in the Bell company's petition.

The Mansfield company contends that it sent the Bell company a check for $8,438 as the balance due for the period, but the check was returned because it allegedly did not cover the entire amount due.

The Bell company owed the Mansfield Telephone company $1,596 for floor space, rental, and handling charges, and that amount was deducted from the bill due the Bell company, the answer points out.

Recovery of the $1,596 allegedly due the Mansfield company for the special services is sought in the cross petition. Atty. M. D. Ward jr., represents the Mansfield Telephone company in its counter action.

APPEALS COURT DOCKET READY FOR NEW TERM

10 Cases to Be Brought Into Circuit Court Meeting In Mansfield Sept. 18.

The Fifth district appeals court will convene in Mansfield Sept. 18 to hear at least 10 cases brought up from the Richland county common pleas court.

Two of the appeals will involve the estate of the late Jacob Flowers of Sandusky township, which has been in and out of the courts for several years.

In another case, Mrs. Drucella Gatton, Mansfield, will seek reversal of a common pleas court decision which denied her damages in an action against the city of Mansfield.

Seeking a test of the city's sewer rental ordinance, Mrs. Gatton brought an action to force the city waterworks department to provide service for her residence on South Main street and to pay damages for inconvenience that allegedly resulted from the loss of water service.

Her request was denied in common pleas court and she was ordered to pay the sewer rental with the water service charge to have service restored.

Separate appeals in the Flowers estate case were filed by the heirs of Jacob Flowers and the Richland Trust company, Mansfield, administrator of his estate.

The appeals seek distribution of the balance of a $30,000 estate to the heirs of Mr. Flowers as previously ordered in Richland county probate court.

Mr. Flowers, who died in 1918, left his widow a life interest in the estate. After her death it was to go to the Salvation Army in Mansfield, the First Methodist church in Galion, and the Methodist Board of Foreign and Home Missions.

When Mrs. Flowers died she also left a will, but she made other religious and welfare organizations the beneficiaries. The dispute has been over which of the wills should determine distribution of the estate which has dwindled rapidly as attorney fees and court costs were paid from it.

Most of the other cases to come before the appeals court judges involve damage suits or disputes over property.

LONDON CENTER THREATENED BY GERMAN FLIERS

Bank of England, St. Paul's Cathedral and London Bridge Menaced.

the attack at least approximated the intensity of the previous two raids.

There were attacks, too, outside of London—in northwestern England and rural districts of the southwest in the Midlands, Wales and Scotland—but they were overshadowed by the fury of the blows at the capital of empire.

The bombardment finally was broken off just before dawn by a tremendous surprise anti-aircraft barrage which beat back the last of the raiders.

The 800 to 1,000 pound bombs ferried over by big four-motor German planes were dumped into the center of the city, wrecking some midtown office buildings and damaging centuries-old landmarks.

One hundred and twenty persons were reported buried in the wreckage of 20 houses shattered in a single district. Rescue crews digging into the rubble by dawn had found only 20 alive. A number of casualties were reported at a maternity hospital.

Although the attack at times reached the intensity of the raids the previous two nights, it appeared to lack the sustained punch which they maintained. The bombing was less steady and early indications were that fewer big fires were started and few bombs were dropped.

Even after the all clear signal brought weary Londoners out of their shelters, the battle of Britain went on with a thunderous cross-channel duel of destruction by long range guns resuming the shelling started the night before.

The third of the big night raids on London followed the same pattern adopted by the Nazi attackers since they switched from daylight bombings and concentrated on the British capital.

A few planes led the way, dropping incendiary bombs. The rest followed, their racks loaded with powerful explosives, guided to their targets by the glare of the fires.

Five tremendous explosions were heard in the Fleet street section, center of London newspaper offices.

A children's hospital was hit. Fires broke out in the northwest. One roaring salvo of bombs hurled debris of south London buildings high into the air. Bombs dropped on sanctuaries for the aged. Two hospitals were hit in central London.

Thirty mothers and 20 babies had a narrow escape when bombs fell around a maternity hospital. All the patients were moved from the building within 15 minutes after a call for help was sounded.

"Fathers who later came to the hospital as quickly as they could on receiving the news were in fact far more upset than the women," said a rescue worker.

The raiders scattered fire after fire, but the firemen worked without a letup to localize the flames. From a city roof-top the reflected glow of the flames could be seen in all directions. The crackle from the nearby fires mingled with the drone of bombers.

ARP squads dug frantically into the ruins of a house hit by high explosive in the southeast London district after a number of persons were reported trapped.

Several persons were feared killed in a northeast district when high explosives reduced six or seven houses to debris.

A bomb tore through three floors to the terrace of a building in central London. At another point a bomb hit the roadway, killing a man and a woman.

Italians Carry Out Widespread Raids.

ROME—(INS)—Devastating Italian air raids on widespread areas of British territory from the Holy Land to Egypt were announced today in an official communique which stated:

"Italian aviation was particularly active in the eastern Mediterranean and carried out violent raids on Port Jaffa, Palestine, and the Alexandria-Mersamatruh railroad.

"At Jaffa, port structures and important depots were hit, starting vast fires. Alexandria-Mersamatruh railroad structures were seriously damaged, and one train was directly hit, blowing fragments high into the air.

"In northern Africa Italian aviation sought out, bombed and machine-gunned enemy encampments and motorized columns.

"In east Africa our fighting formation attacked an air base at Port Sudan from the air, hitting several airplanes on the ground and starting fires. Attacked other enemy bases. Italian pilots brought down all but two of the invaders."

TEACHER QUITS, NEW ONE HIRED

Recent resignation of Mrs. Dorothy Alexander as a teacher at Shenandoah cleared the way last night for the reassignment by the Union rural board of education of Miss Dorothy Doggett.

Miss Doggett, who had previously been assigned to the Ganges school which was closed by transfer of school territory to Shelby by the county board of education last week, will take over Mrs. Alexander's duties at Shenandoah.

Also hired by the Union rural board last night was Miss Beryl Glenn, 125 Flint street, Mansfield, to teach at the British school.

NAZI CAPITAL HIT BY RAIDS

Bombs Dropped in Northern Suburbs of Berlin By British Fliers.

ant military objectives in London and elsewhere.

Only one British plane, it was claimed, actually succeeded in piercing through the air defenses of greater Berlin. This machine dropped explosive and incendiary bombs on the northern suburb of Rosenthal, damaging several houses and setting two barns on fire. No casualties were announced.

Prior to the Berlin air raid alarm an announcement said that a group of British planes flew over the German coast but was forced to turn back near Wesermuende by heavy anti-aircraft fire. Most of the British planes dropped their bombs into the water to enable them to climb more quickly, this announcement stated.

First sign of the approach of British bombers was anti-aircraft fire far to the west. Flashes of the guns illuminated low-hanging clouds.

Later anti-aircraft batteries to the southeast, southwest and north went into action and at 1:45 a. m. the official alarm was given. At about this moment flares and then bombs fell north of the city. Sporadic gunfire on the outskirts of the capital continued until 2:10 a. m.

German squadron leaders returning from the raids against London said that the latest attacks had been "exceedingly successful and that the British air defenses were growing "noticeably weaker."

British pursuit planes, they claimed, now are avoiding major engagements and the marksmanship of the British anti-aircraft batteries is declining owing to the weariness of the British gunners.

Indicating a growing shortage of trained pilots, German officials asserted, the Royal Air Force has been compelled to close several training schools and assign students to active service at the front ahead of schedule.

During last night's attack on London, authorities said, 300 Nazi plants attacked the British capital in waves every 30 or 40 minutes, causing fires which raised a dense smoke screen over London and the Thames Estuary.

Military objectives at Canterbury also were bombed, these quarters said, and at least 40 British planes were shot down while 16 German planes were listed as missing.

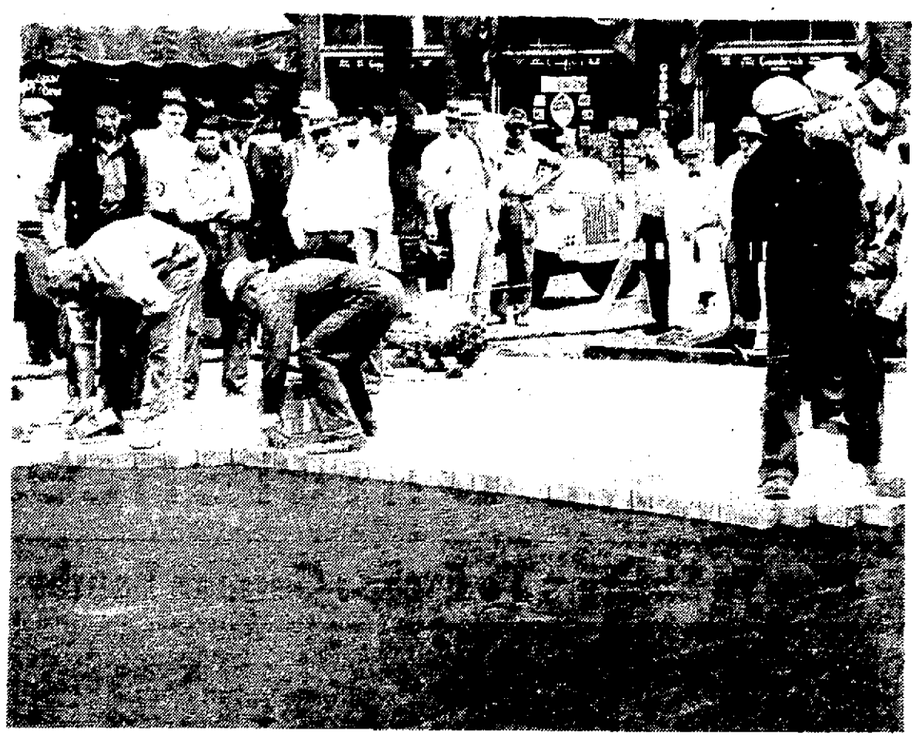
As Veil Begins To Lift On 'Ghost' Street



The above scene is one which Fourth street merchants have been anxiously awaiting for the past two months. The picture, taken shortly after noon yesterday, shows workmen as they started laying brick on the center section of the roadway at North Diamond street. At noon today the work had progressed nearly to Main street, and state highway officials predicted that the block-section would be completed before evening. The pavement, however, must be sealed with tar and other incidental work completed before it will be opened to traffic. Carl Stander, president of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, contractor, said yesterday that it would require about 10 days to finish laying brick between North Diamond and North Mulberry streets.

mation, proclaiming Saturday as the day citizens should offer the band a helping hand.

Members of the band will sell the tags Saturday and will be easy to recognize beacuse of their uniforms. In their hands will be red banks, where donations may be deposited.

"We have one of the best bands in the state, why shouldn't we have uniforms to correspond?" is the opinion of the band members and their parents.

No Money Available.

Band members buy their own instruments, and there is no school fund from which money can be had to buy uniforms. That's why the band must go to the public for money to buy uniforms, the group pointed out.

The committee for "Tag Day" is composed of Mrs. T. L. Hockett, general chairman; Mrs. Wayne Mumford, publicity; J. Merton Holcombe, in charge of student workers; Mrs. Fred Ohler, donation bands; and Mrs. James Burkhart, tags.

The committee will meet next week to select the uniforms.

Those who cannot come down town on Saturday and would like to donate to the fund are requested by the committee to call Canal 3330 and a worker will call at the home.

titions to complete his investigation.

The petitions will be held at election board headquarters "for at least 24 hours" Porter declared.

"We feel that residents of Richland county should have an opportunity to examine these petitions if they care to do so," he added.

Meanwhile, the Mansfield chapter of the Ohio Society of Sons of the American Revolution had today commended The News-Journal for its publication of names appearing on the petitions.

John T. Shook, president of the local chapter, stated:

"At the last meeting of Constitution Chapter . . a resolution was presented and unanimously approved commending the stand taken by The Mansfield News-Journal on circulation of Communist petitions and the methods used in securing such signatures. . . ."

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Claiming to have proved widespread fraud in Communist election petitions, leading to the party being ruled off the ballot in several states, Dies committee investigators today launched similar probes in three more key states — New Jersey, Illinois and Ohio.

Names and addresses of all citizens who signed petitions for the Communist party to appear on the November ballot in those states are being obtained by the investigators.

When these are in hand, letters will be sent, simply asking the signers if their names are on the ballots with their knowledge and consent. The resulting data will be turned over to proper state authorities.

Investigators said they anticipated similar replies to those obtained in other states, where they claimed a high percentage of fraud. They said they had many cases in which signers wrote in saying the petition had been misrepresented to them, or that their names were there without their knowledge. Cases where names were duplicated or false names used also were reported.

PUTS IT BACK

Thief Replaces Loot as 400 Look on In Canton.

CANTON, O.—(U.P.)—A bit of "New England Justice" attracted a crowd of 400 persons to watch a thief replace the wheels he had stolen from a parked car.

A card in a window at nearby Louisville read: "The wheels and tires were stolen from this car. They will be replaced by the thief at 7:30 tonight."

The culprit had been apprehended and sentenced to 30 days in jail, fined $18, and placed on probation for a year. However, the fine and jail sentences were suspended on condition that the thief publicly replace the wheels.

He was escorted from the jail and replaced them in about 25 minutes before the jeering crowd. Mayor Earl C. Lair said the sentence was not for the purpose of humiliating the man, but to impress the town's residents and visitors.

tract program for expanding shore facilities and establishments to handle the two-ocean navy. This probably will be ready for announcement this week.

4—Steps by the war department, which received a total of $1,045,000,000 in cash or contractual authorization in the $5,251,000,000 measure, to begin activities by awarding quickly about $524,000,000 in contracts. Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson told President Roosevelt that this would include $450,000,000 for ordnance items, guns, ammunition, tanks, and other equipment, about $56,000,000 for quartermaster corps construction work, and $18,000,000 for the army engineers.

The army's share of the bill is designed to provide full equipment for an army of 1,200,000 men plus reserve stocks of thousands of tanks, anti-aircraft guns, artillery and other items for a potential force of 2,000,000 men. The funds will provide also for 15,000 more army planes to give it an ultimate total of 25,000 by 1942.

Another phase of the program expected to begin immediately is the construction of 60 powder and munitions factories. Contracts for five such plants have been signed. The defense bill signed yesterday added $325,000,000 to the $240,000,000 already received by the army for this work. Many sites for the new plants were reported to have been agreed upon with final contract negotiations in progress. The plants, although financed by the government, will be constructed and operated by private business on a fixed fee basis.

Says Hitler Seeks Complete Paralysis of London

NIXON REPORTS LIFE GOES ON, FACTORIES HUM

City Withstands Shock of Aerial Terror, Bombing of Residences.

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(By International News Service)

LONDON—Adolf Hitler is seeking the complete paralysis of London.

The pattern of Nazi Germany's attacks against the heart and brain of the British Empire becomes increasingly apparent with each succeeding night and day of terror and ordeal.

By sheer aerial terror, he is trying to frighten or starve the population into submission.

By immobilizing the city and cutting off the life flow of business, bombers have struck repeatedly at the means of the city's life.

By blasting poor residential areas for square miles he is seeking to undermine the morale of these courageous, tough people.

By repeated attacks on docks and railroads, he is seeking to starve the city's millions.

By aiming at power plants, gas works, water mains, electric and telephone cables he is trying to reduce the city to the primitive life of cave-dwellers, without fire to cook their food, without water for drinking, bathing and sanitary necessities.

If he can accomplish these purposes London might one day become populated by a half-starving handful, living in basements or roaming in shattered ruins.

But to this and other observers such a catastrophe, for the present at least, appears to dwell only in the imagination.

There are inconveniences, there are deaths and injuries and there is destruction in many areas and no one enjoys this continued bombing. But life of the city goes on. Factories hum, war efforts are speeded up and the anger of the people rises higher hourly.

Last night the German bombers again struck repeatedly at all those things essential to the city's life, directing heavy blows at London's "city" in the shadow of St Paul's cathedral.

Here the purpose apparently was to halt the business functions of a block of export trade houses and the normal domestic functions of the island.

I have just spent several hours in the devastated areas. Here again buildings were smashed flat, square blocks roped off, streets filled with the debris of smashed buildings, chunks of concrete weighing tons and goods of all descriptions.

Many delayed action bombs are still hidden in these areas and several times I had to duck and run to cover to escape a hail of debris as the bombs went off with a terrific blast.

But on the fringes of this wrecked area business went on as usual. Clerks, stenographers, salesmen and executives came to work—most of them on foot because of interrupted communications. They are doing their daily stints with renewed vigor despite many sleepless nights, figuratively thumbing their noses at the Nazi terror.

FOUR FINED

Motorists Accused of Unsafe Driving, Speeding.

Warning that a second offense would mean the loss of their operator's permits, Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch fined four drivers $10 and costs each this morning in municipal court when they were cited before him for speeding and unsafe driving.

Those fined for speeding were W. Harold Freese, 198 South Main street; Charles Thomas, Ashland, and T. A. Nickalous, R. D. 2, Lexington. Nickalous pleaded innocent and was convicted. The other two pleaded guilty to the charges.

Courtney A. Abbott, Ashland, was fined for unsafe driving. State highway patrolmen said he drove from a side road onto U. S. route 42 at 50 miles an hour and failed to stop.

WPA Workers Are Interviewed For Defense Training

At 20 minute intervals throughout today, Wednesday, and Thursday, 315 men from Richland county WPA rolls will be interviewed in the court of appeals room at the courthouse for defense training classifications.

R. C. Ferguson, assistant supervisor of occupational classification for WPA at Columbus, explained the purpose of the interviews this morning as the first of the men arrived.

He said men would be classified for possible training in the defense classes at Mansfield high school, for "refresher courses" if they have already had training which would make them useful in defense industries, and for eligibility to industry if they are now fully trained for the work.

Interviews will occur on the three days between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

CHIEF TO ATTEND POLICE PARLEY

Police Chief Meade K. Bates will be among several hundred law enforcement officers from all parts of Ohio who will gather in Akron Oct. 8 to attend the 10th annual convention of the Ohio Association of Chiefs of Police.

The meeting will be concluded with election of officers and selection of the 1941 convention city.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN MAINE

Party Leaders Call Victory Happy Omen for National Success in November.

not cause Democratic leaders to alter their pre-election insistence that the election had no significance beyond the state's border. They said then that 1936 had effectively disproved the saying: "As Maine goes, so goes the nation."

While the Maine figures were being studied by rival party leaders, Alaska was voting today in a "farthest north" general election, and eight states were holding primaries which will designate candidates for a total of 5 seats in the senate and 47 in the house of representatives. Gubernatorial nominations also were on the tickets in all except Louisiana.

The states holding primaries today were: Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington. Georgia will have a primary tomorrow and New Mexico on Saturday.

Arizona had a wide-open race for the designation of Democratic presidential electors, with Willkie Democrats challenging three different sets of electors supporting Roosevelt. Failure of the Democrats to file nominating petitions for electors left the issue to be decided by write-in votes. A victory for the Willkie slate would pledge the electors to cast Arizona's votes for him even though he might not carry the state in November.

Louisiana's balloting carried echoes of the battle which ousted Huey P. Long's political dynasty, with Governor Sam H. Jones appealing for the defeat of the state's entire delegation in the house of representatives. In Minnesota's primary, Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite for 18 years who left his party this summer, was seeking the Republican senatorial nomination in a four-man race.

Another Minnesota contest found Governor Harold E. Stassen, Republican national convention keynoter, seeking renomination, with two opponents.

In Michigan Senator Vandenberg was asking re-nomination on the Republican ticket.

DESTROYER TRADE UPHELD AS LEGAL BY BAR ASSOCIATION

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— President Roosevelt's trading of 50 over-age American destroyers to Great Britain for naval bases was defended before the American Bar Association today as entirely constitutional and within the bounds of international law.

The destroyer-naval base deal was analyzed at the lawyers' 63rd annual meeting by James W. Ryan of New York, chairman of the group's committee on law protecting Americans and their property in foreign countries.

"Propriety of the action of the president in acquiring title to new possessions for purposes of national defense cannot be seriously questioned under either international law or our own constitution," Ryan asserted. "The move was necessary for our national defense, and had the effect on the whole of greatly increasing it.

"The popular conception that any action taken by a neutral which aids one of the belligerents is a violation of international law is clearly wrong," the New York attorney said. "In instance is the fact that the law permits citizens of neutral countries to carry on trade in arms with one of the belligerents and not with the other."

Ryan pointed out that under the constitution the president is the "proper person to determine what is urgently necessary for national defense and take the necessary steps accordingly." Congress was not required to participate in the destroyer deal, he said, because an appropriation of funds was not necessary in the transaction.

Previously, William S. Culbertson, former U. S. ambassador to Chile, called for an "end of pretense and hyprocrisy" in our diplomatic relations by "frankly admitting" the present war crisis has nullified present neutrality laws.

CLOSE VIADUCT FOR TESTING OF NEW SURFACE

Workmen Remove Flooring to Place Asphalt Top on Mulberry Span.

Traffic was being detoured around the South Mulberry street viaduct today while street department workmen repaired the surface of the structure.

The span was closed yesterday afternoon after Superintendent of Streets Charles Hebel had conferred with city officials on an "experimental" plan for eliminating the noise caused by traffic.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said that work would be completed and the span opened to traffic probably late tomorrow.

Workmen are removing the plank flooring and putting down an asphalt surface in hope that it will eliminate the noise caused by the loose planking, Crafton said.

Only about 10 feet of the north end of the structure is being repaired. If this "experiment" eliminates the noise, Crafton said council would be asked to appropriate funds to complete the project.

Council appropriated $500 for repairing the bridge several months ago. A "stirrup method" of tying down the planking to cross beams failed to eliminate the noise and the plank has gotten worse since that time, it was pointed out.

Crafton estimated that $3,000 would be needed to resurface the entire structure.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10 1940.

When the meek inherit the earth none will head into a parking space just as you are ready to back in.

Doctors say that only brainy persons have hay fever—and any attempt to simulate the symptoms is quite unconvincing.

Not so much is being said about Wendell Willkie's wealth —since it has become known that he has five farms depending on him for support.

Great Britain Must Strike Back

HOWEVER much Adolf Hitler may be annoyed and angered by Great Britain's counter raids over Germany and Italy, it is becoming increasingly evident that more than defensive warfare is essential to British victory and that the quicker substantial offensives can be conducted against Hitler and Mussolini the better it will be for Britain.

The terrific aerial pummeling to which the British Isles have been subjected in recent weeks, culminating in an intensified attack over the week-end, gives an idea of the utter ruthlessness of Nazi warfare and brings realization that force must be met by even greater force, if the hordes of Hitler are to be repelled.

While civilized people stand aghast at such atrocities, the brutal truth must be accepted that, in order to escape complete demolition, Great Britain must deal similar blows to Germany and Italy and that, in the process, it cannot be avoided that many who are innocent will suffer with the guilty.

Military targets have been the ostensible objectives of German raiders over the British Isles, but bombs dropped from high in the air have fallen indiscriminately in military and non-military sections and have taken a heavy toll among civilians as well as destroying many homes in London and elsewhere over the Isles.

As Great Britain continues to strengthen its air force to the point of maintaining essential defenses and sparing more bombing planes for offensive action, some of the horror now being visited upon the British Isles must necessarily be experienced by the people of Germany and Italy.

This is war—the kind of war that the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere is hoping to be able to keep on the other side of the Atlantic ocean.

Ashland Road Speedway

UNTIL speeding on Mansfield streets has been more effectively dealt with, there is apparent need for more "stop and go" traffic lights than are now in operation.

There is, for instance, a particularly bad spot where East Fourth streets ends at Ashland road—scene of a crash last Saturday afternoon.

The habit of excessive speed on Ashland road has become so common that few drivers seem to realize that 35 miles an hour is the legal speed maximum on this thoroughfare, and with cars approaching at high speed from both directions, the turn from East Fourth street constitutes a serious hazard.

Several years ago a traffic light was placed at this point but was permitted to remain only a short time, possibly because of objections that it "slowed down" Ashland road traffic.

Eventual completion of Fourth street re-paving will result in increased use of this thoroughfare in reaching either the Ashland road or Route 30 to the east, and one of two things should be done—either speeding should be stopped on Ashland road, inside the city limits, or a traffic light should be re-installed at the end of East Fourth street.

Shrinking Populations

KANSAS, with a 4.4 per cent decline in population shown by the last census, is naturally chagrined. Likewise her neighbors Oklahoma, Nebraska and the Dakotas. And it hasn't been only in the rural areas especially affected by the "dust bowl" drouths. Most Kansas cities with more than 10,000 people lost in this last decade. Kansas City itself shrank one-half of one per cent.

The fact is that growth of the national population as a whole has been slowing down, and nearly all states are affected to some extent. The change is explained broadly as resulting from stricter barriers against immigration, plus the fact that the nation is "growing up" and has a lower birth rate.

If the trend toward static population causes worry, it can be remedied quickly by lowering the barriers. Millions in Europe and Asia would rush to get into this favored land if they had a chance. But we are more likely to tighten our defenses against immigrant floods than to relax them.

Working Wives—Blessing or Blight?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS Working Wife discussion . . . try 'n' stop it! Just try. Every mail brings a score of arguments why these Go-Gettem Gals are a blessing—or a blight. F'instance, this—

Dear Miss Robinson:

I'm an American girl of a good mid-west family . . . high standards . . . an adequate education. I'm eager, industrious, ambitious for myself and my family. Moreover, I once made a real record. Although I never wished to be a "career woman" I served five years as a private secretary in a large law firm after I graduated from high school.

And then she married!

Yes. I married the man I truly loved and respected, although, by every "practical" estimate, he was a "bad match"—being only a junior salesman in a nation-wide business concern. It was the same old theme—"I CAN'T BRING YOU ANYTHING BUT LOVE, DARLING!" But that was enough. Cash balance or business rating—they meant nothing to me. Our mutual affection and ideals were all that counted.

"You're sure you'll never regret it, sweetheart?" he whispered to me "You'll never want to go back to the working world again. Just me . . . and our love nest . . . and the babies that will come . . . will that be enough?"

And I told him I wouldn't . . . and it would.

BUT TODAY I KNOW I LIED.

For today I'm sitting in a dark-and dreary apartment, while my three pasty-faced, malnourished babies play indifferently in a filthy alley outside. There isn't one single object of beauty in our three cramped rooms nor, I sometimes think, in my own demoralized spirit. Yet, with one brave effort I could lift us all out of this. I could give my children health and happiness. I could lift us out of this deadly dreariness. For the firm which once employed me still offers me a position.

BUT MY HUSBAND WON'T LET ME GO HIS PRIDE WON'T STAND IT. HE SWEARS HE'LL NEVER HAVE A "WORKING WIFE' AND HE'S HOLDING ME TO MY PROMISE.

So what? Am I good wife? Or a complete and heartless fool?

EDNA MARGARET S.
Santa Barbara, Calif.

THAT'S one viewpoint. Then here's another—

DEAR ELSIE ROBINSON—

ANYTIME A WOMAN DEPRIVES HER HUSBAND OF THE DIVINE RIGHT TO GOVERN AND PROVIDE FOR HIS HOUSEHOLD SHE SELLS HIM SHORT.

Having been a registered nurse, I continued my profession after marriage against my husband's objection. I thought he belittled my intelligence by expecting me to be a mere wife and mother, so, as soon as possible, I placed the children in boarding schools and continued my career.

But when the youngsters reached high-school age, they demanded home life and I reluctantly left my job and became a housewife. No one will know what a sacrafice it meant! Yet, having reached maturity my children frankly inform me that I fell down on my job as a mother by not staying home and giving them a mother's care—even though I gave them such luxuries—clothes, money, a car which they could never have had otherwise. And my husband evidently agrees with them because if I mention a return to my profession, he plainly shows his displeasure.

And I've come at last to agree with them. I believe this world would be infinitely happier if women gave more attention to marriage and less to "careers" outside the home. And my advice to younger women is NEVER NEVER SCRAP THE SANCTITY OF A HOME FOR THE GLAMOUR OF A JOB!

Timely Editorial

English As Spoken.

The English language is still an untamed force, especially in America—a frisky, unpredictable critter that professors can't lasso and lexicographers can't get under more than partial control.

New words like jitterbug, okie, corny and deadpan must make the scholars blanch, but they belong to the lusty tradition of older words, now perfectly respectable, which have graduated from slang-uage and become part of our common vocabulary—like mugwump, copperhead, unhorn sport and card-sharp.

Canada has recently coined a new word, more proper than these but just as strange at first sight: embus, meaning to board a bus. We don't know whether that will stick or not. Why hasn't entrolley ever entered the vocabulary? Why do we entrain but not emplane?

There are countless inexplicable and illogical quirks in our temperamental English language. The undertaker has become a mortician or a funeral director, and cabins for tourists have become motels, but a grocer remains a grocer. A tremendous flop is a flopperoo, but what is a tremendous wow—a wowerroo? — Minneapolis Star-Journal.

This Is Ohio

ELEVEN species of animals which lived in Ohio at one time no longer are to be found. They included Wolverine, Fisher, Pine Marten, Timber wolf, Canada lynx, Bobcat, Mountain lion, Snowshoe rabbit, Elk, Moose and Bison. And, with the exception of the White-tailed deer, no wild animal ever has been successfully introduced.

Ohio is the second largest producer of fur pelts. These come chiefly from Skunk, Muskrat, Opposum, Raccoon, Fox, Mink and Weasel. Louisiana is the only state to top Ohio.

"Drawing" Room?

One never or hardly ever draws in a drawing room, why is it so called?

On its face, the term "drawing room" does not seem to give any hint as to its origin; but it does, and, once revealed, obviously.

For "drawing room" is a contraction of the original "withdrawing room," the modern living room to which mine host and his guests withdraw after dinner, for coffee, liqueurs, tobacco — and chit-chat.

LaGuardia to Campaign for FDR; Fleet to Be Kept In the Pacific

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who received one vote in the Philadelphia convention for the GOP presidential nomination, soon will assume the chairmanship of a committee of leading progressives to campaign for Roosevelt.

Others prominent in the committee will be Senator George Norris, veteran Nebraska liberal; William T. Evjue, militant editor of the Capital Times, Madison, Wis., which is the official daily of the LaFollette Progressive organization; and David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which last spring bolted the CIO to return to the AFL.

Headquarters of the progressive committee will be in New York. It will have no connection with the Democratic national committee and will operate independently. David Niles, astute former aide of Harry Hopkins, will be executive director. In 1924, Niles was one of the managers of the LaFollette-Wheeler independent presidential campaign.

Both LaGuardia and Norris plan active speaking tours, the former making a transcontinental trip, and Norris making several speeches in the Middle West, where he has a large following.

Note—Senator Bob LaFollette, up for re-election this year, is telling his friends that personally he is for Roosevelt, but is awaiting the action of the Wisconsin Progressive convention this month before declaring for him publicly. The LaFollettes supported Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936.

Hull's Vigor

CORDELL HULL put on a great show for newsmen the day the destroyer deal was announced. Hull hasn't been so eloquent for years.

Usually his press conferences are flat and unprofitable. The secretary of state is a master of evasion and understatement. He stands at the end of the long polished table, with his long hands folded over the back of a chair, looking down his nose at nothing.

But when the boys asked Hull about the legality of sending destroyers to England in exchange for British bases, his eyes flashed, his halting delivery disappeared, and he defended the deal with a force and fluency that made the room electric.

There was only one thing wrong. As newsmen were about to burst from the room with the Hull statement, they were cautioned to use it only for "background." This meant no quotes and no attribution.

But the press corps will long remember the spectacle of the white-haired gentle old man deeply stirred by a sense of the transcendental character of these stirring times.

Air Bases.

CABLED reaction from Tokyo indicated that the Japanese were suspicious that something more than appeared on the surface was behind Cordell Hull's warning against the invasion of French Indo-China.

In this, they were right. There was.

Nobody in the navy department is shouting it from the house-tops, but the U. S. fleet—or at least most of it—will now remain in the Pacific.

Previously it was considered necessary to bring the fleet from Hawaii and California in order to station most of it around Panama and the Caribbean. This would have made it impossible to keep a watchful eye on Japanese operations in the direction of the Malays and the Dutch East Indies—all-important sources of American tin and rubber.

Probably it will still be necessary to bring a few ships to the Atlantic side of the Canal. But the island base deal with Great Britain has now made it possible to police most of the Caribbean and the Atlantic seaboard by air instead of by sea.

Naval Notes.

AT FIRST the chief improvement to the new U. S. bases on British islands will be airports. Not only are they needed immediately, but also are cheapest and quickest to construct. Naval bases, which mean oil tanks and repair facilities, take time to build and may never be constructed to any great extent. The U. S. Navy will take advantage of British naval facilities for the time being. . . . Significant was the fact that many of the over-age destroyers being sold to England were fitted out with cables to neutralize magnetic mines even before the deal was published by the president. In other words, there had been no real doubt for a week or so before the announcement that the deal would be closed. . . . Negotiations for naval bases by no means are terminated. What the navy wants more than anything else is a good base in Brazilian waters, and if possible one in Uruguay. Informal conversations regarding a Brazilian base have been going on for some time.

French Ambassador.

HENRI HAYE, newly appointed French ambassador to the United States, long has served as the mayor of Versailles and therefore was in the thick of the German occupation of France.

One story which American diplomats tell about him is that when regiment after regiment marched through Versailles, the commander of each sent for the mayor, with instructions to come to headquarters to pay his respects. Each time, however, Ambassador Haye refused, said that he was the mayor and that the visiting German could come to see him.

Finally, one irate German commander arrested him and brought him to headquarters, where he demanded an explanation.

"You can arrest me bodily," replied the mayor of Versailles, "but you can't compel my spirit to submit."

Later, the German commander called at the mayor's office and apologized.

Newspaper War.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has had a lot of rows with the press, but there have not been many rows inside the press over him. Therefore, few things recently have given him such a kick as the cut-throat, two-fisted, knock-down-and gouge-their-eyes out war between the St. Louis Star-Times and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch over the exchange of island bases for 50 over-age destroyers.

There is no doubt, of course, as to which paper the president applauded—the St. Louis Star-Times.

The first word he got of this good old-fashioned newspaper row was when he picked up the New York Times to see that the St. Louis Post-Dispatch had spent $1,500 for a full page ad in which to proclaim "DICTATOR ROOSEVELT COMMITS AN ACT OF WAR," and to call his destroyer trade "the worst sucker real estate deal in history." The Post-Dispatch also bought a full page ad in the Washington Star.

Next day the St. Louis Star-Times came back with two full page ads in the same papers which made the Post-Dispatch's name-calling look like a spelling-bee.

Calling the Post-Dispatch "distempered, rash and hasty," the Star-Times said that it had set a "record of ignominy which should last for a hundred years."

President Roosevelt read the editorial and grinned.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — The class will come to order for its first quiz of the fall term.

Q: Who is Ellery Queen, the mystery writer?

A: Ellery Queen, isn't a fellow. He's two Jewish boys who produce radio shows in addition to writing murder mysteries. Previously they wrote under the name of Barnaby Ross.

Q: In London No. 10 Downing street is the address of the prime minister, but what is it in New York?

A: No. 10 Downing street in New York is a parking lot. It's down in the Village and it'll cost you a quarter if you want to park your hack there.

Q: What usually happens to laundrymen who fail?

A: Well, Arch Selwyn once owned a laundry in Puerto Rico. After it failed he returned to New York and became a famous Broadway producer.

Q Have you ever heard the names of Thermä, Narvol and Urseil?

A: Maybe you have to come from Utah to hear names like that. They are the sisters of pretty Lorraine Day, the little Mormon girl who went to Hollywood and got a break but who wasn't too blase to stare when the Hollywood promoters brought her on a build-up visit to New York. "My mother just makes up names like that," explains Lorraine. "But if you think they're unusual, wait'll I tell you about my uncle, whose name will kill you. It's Snelien Ichabod."

Q: If you can name a song identified with some form of sport that has become a real American classic, teacher will reverse the procedure and give you the apple.

A: How about "Take Me Out to the Ball Game?" That's a real American classic that will live as long as baseball is played.

Q: Well, how about naming a couple of streets that have been immortalized by jazz?

A: That's easy—Beale street in Memphis ("Beale Street Blues"), and Rampart street in New Orleans ("Rampart Street Parade").

Q Where is Tin Pan Alley?

A: It isn't anywhere. It's a legendary street that doesn't actually exist and never has. When song writers in the old days banged their tinny pianos in search of melodies, they sometimes made an awful fuss. From this far-fetched source the name of Tin Pan Alley has grown into a mythical highroad of hit tune composers. Tin Pan Alley is where you find it. It is wherever songs are born.

A: Finally, how about a few of the inconsistencies that help make New York what it is?

Q: Well, there are no banks on Bank street the 7th avenue street car runs on Broadway and the Broadway trolley runs on 7th avenue; Abe Lyman is the only orchestra leader in town who began life as a taxi driver, and the North river is west of Manhattan. Furthermore, there are no brooms sold on Broom street, and Pershing Square isn't a square but merely an intersection in 42nd street.

A Farmer's Diary

A Hungry Man

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE TRAMP had a high broad forehead, an iron gray beard, and a pair of faded, wistful brown eyes. He limped as he came down the hill to our door at nearly noon.

"Will you give me a bite to eat?" he asked hesitantly. "I'm—hungry."

"Sit down," I said. "Perhaps we can find you something." My wife went to put on the coffee pot.

"Where are you going?" I asked.

"To Killbuck. I have a friend there who owns a farm. I'd ha' been there already if 'twasn't for this foot goin' bad on me." He sighed and passed one hand over his forehead.

"Will you stay with your friend this winter?" I wondered.

"I don't know. Winter's too far off to worry about. But I kin husk corn, if I get where I'm aimin' to. That's good work, corn huskin', and a man don't need a birth certificate or a new suit of clothes to git the job."

"How old are you?" I asked him.

"I was born in 1856. That makes me 84. It don't seem long."

"You went to country school?"

"Yes—and two years of normal. I had a good education."

"Did you teach?"

"Twelve consecutive years," he admitted.

"What about your family?"

"I didn't ever marry. My youngest sister is livin' but her husband and I don't hitch. So I dug out. Most of my friends are gone. I don't have much to give friends any more though. I slept in a man's barn last night. I slept good. He gave me a blanket. I only had a piece for breakfast. I got to feelin' weak this last hour. This is good homemade bread, and the coffee's awful good. I was needin' it."

He ate two fried eggs and some sliced tomatoes with apparent relish. He ate deliberately, but hungrily. He soughed a second cup of coffee and pushed back his chair.

"Well, I hope if you ever have to beg for a meal, you get it. I feel better. I'll stop down at the stream and put a clean dressing on this foot. A horse dealer gave me these shoes. They're two sizes too big, but that's a good thing, this trip."

We watched him start on down the dusty road. "He's like a reckless runaway child," remarked my wife. "He doesn't care what happens to him."

"He's hungrier for companionship and appreciation than he is for bread," I mused. "He'll enjoy husking corn. I hope his friend has a field. But I wonder what he does with his old age pension."

FISHING TRIPS GAVE FDR IDEA FOR AIR BASES

President Well Acquainted With Topography of Pacific Isles.

(Editor's Note: Increasing speculation that the United States may acquire naval base rights on Cocos island, Costa Rican possession in the Pacific last week prompted reporters to ask President Roosevelt about the island's desirability. Mr. Roosevelt said that all such inquiries should be referred to George Durno, International News service correspondent, that Durno was one of four individuals including himself, who was thoroughly familiar with the island.)

By GEORGE DURNO
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Screening a very definite purpose behind the desire to go deep sea fishing President Roosevelt as commander-in-chief of the military establishment for at least six years has been appraising the potential value of many islands in both Atlantic and Pacific as potential long-range defense bases of the Panama canal.

Aboard navy cruisers and destroyers he has visited and surveyed, since 1934 all of the Atlantic bases just acquired from Great Britain ranging from Newfoundland to Trinidad.

In the past six years the chief executive has fished closely around every Pacific island that might serve as a 600-mile outpost from the vital canal zone.

Mr. Roosevelt was cruising in Nova Scotian and Newfoundland waters in August 1939, when Germany invaded Poland to set Europe aflame with war and force him back posthaste to Washington.

He has the topography, harbor possibilities, sea and weather hazards of every island skirting both coasts firmly in his mind. It is possible that his World war service as assistant secretary of the navy led him to such an early survey of what is now becoming an actuality.

The president's last cruise was through the Panama canal in February of this year to Cocos island, about 600 miles from Balboa off the mainland of Costa Rica to which government it belongs. He previously had visited Cocos in 1934, 1935 and 1938. By ship radio, he learned that the then president-elect Rafael Calderon Guardia of Costa Rica, who has just offered Cocos to the United States on a long-term lease planned to visit him within a month in Washington.

As Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference—at least from a layman's viewpoint — Cocos island would be of value chiefly to this government as an advance listening post. Neither Chatham Bay nor Wafer Bay, the only two appreciable shoreline indentures, could serve as harbors except under great difficulties. The president noted that under favorable weather conditions the lea side of the island might serve as a take-off for planes a certain number of days in the year but certainly not 365. When he was at anchor in Chatham Bay last February the sea was dead flat for 36 hours. Thereafter a groundswell set in which tossed his two escorting destroyers around rather strenuously.

Cocos, as described by the president, rises sheer out of the water to a height of slightly more than 2,700 feet. It is about 5 miles long, 2 miles wide and 13 miles around. It has virtually no beach—in fact, one side is sheer cliff — and what beach there is may be reached only by wading the surf.

Those of the presidential party who have been there remember it best for red ants, wild pigs, saw grass and sharks.

Last February it was uninhabited but usually there are a few hardy souls in evidence because it is famed as the reputed site of three buried treasures ranging between $20,000,000 and $40,000,000 in value. Costa Rica permits one treasure-hunting party at a time on a share basis and sends along soldiers to look out for their welfare. The last expedition was from London, they being present when the president first visited the island.

First of the buried wealth is said to be part of that removed from old Panama in 1670 ahead of the pillagings of Sir Henry Morgan.

Second treasure is reputed to have been buried by British pirates after they looted a Spanish galleon in 1710.

Third trove, according to the conflicting historians is part of the government treasure of the viceroy of Peru including the golden virgin from the cathedral of Lima dispatched out of the country in 1821 to keep it away from the Spaniards. A portion of this latter treasure was safely transported to Buenos Aires on an American warship the cap-

MAYOR NAMES INSPECTOR ON ROOF DRAINAGE

Hines, Former Water Department Employe, to Inspect Drains on 3,000 Homes.

As another move to eliminate some of Mansfield's water-in-the-cellar trouble, Mayor William J. Locke today announced the appointment of Ray E. Hines, 169 Sturges avenue, to the newly created position of sewer inspector.

Hines, a former bookkeeper in the water department during the administration of former Mayor E. A. McFarland, took over his new duties yesterday afternoon.

Council authorized the employment of a sewer inspector at its Sept. 3 meeting and set up $500 for payment of four months' salary.

Purpose of the job is to follow up a survey of illegal connections to the sanitary sewer system recently completed by WPA.

Check 3,000 Homes.

The survey revealed that some 3,000 roof drains in Mansfield are connected into the sanitary sewer system. City officials claim that this is the reason for serious flood conditions in basements during rainy periods, the sewers surcharging because of the excess load thrown into them by storm water.

Hines' work, the mayor explained, will be to contact property owners which the survey shows have illegal connections and advise them to remove the roof drain from the sewer.

The plan, he said, will call for first notifying these owners by letter of the illegal connection and then a personal visit at a later date to see what if any action has been taken to correct the situation.

Although a city ordinance provides a penalty for attaching roof drains to the sanitary sewers, Locke said it would not be invoked until all of the residents had been warned of the illegal connections and had time to correct them.

The mayor said he doubted if the entire job could be completed during the next few months. It was pointed out that the work would probably have to be suspended during the winter and resumed again next spring.

FEW HOMES IN CITY VACANT

Mansfield Below National Average Despite Building of 350 New Homes.

Despite a record residential construction spree which has accounted for more than 250 new homes during the past year and a half, Mansfield is under the national average in the number of vacant dwellings the U. S. census bureau in Washington reported today.

The report showed that there are a total of 10,972 dwellings in the city with a total of 10,756 occupied. The 216 vacant dwellings revealed a two per cent vacancy or three per cent under the national average.

Cincinnati with 5.8 per cent of its dwellings vacant, was the only Ohio city to be above the national average of five per cent, the bureau reported.

According to the bureau's figures Mansfield showed a dwelling vacancy rating under Middletown, Newark, Springfield and Lima.

Cities with a vacancy average below Mansfield's included Canton, Dayton and Lorain.

Building permit records at City Hall show that more than 200 new homes were constructed in Mansfield in 1939 and that 152 have been started so far this year.

238 COMPLETE COURSE HERE ON DEFENSE WORK

25 Per Cent of 'Students' Placed in Jobs; Program For Fall Drafted.

V. H. Oberlander, supervisor of the National Defense program for Mansfield, announced today that 269 were enrolled in the National Defense classes July 8 when the classes opened at the Senior high school and 238 completed the course on Aug. 30.

Those who took the courses were credited with from 50 to 240 hours in whatever subject they studied, he said.

Of the group 25 per cent were placed in positions through the state employment office while the rest have been placed on state records and will be recommended for jobs later on.

On Wednesday Oberlander will present a report to the National Defense committee of Mansfield, which is composed of W. L. Miller, superintendent of schools; Dr. J. H. Hatters, board of education representative; C. W. Hanley, state employment office; R. M. Lamb and Frank E. Barr, representatives of industry; David Creps and Mathew Mayer, labor representatives, and Oberlander.

Also at the meeting Oberlander will offer for approval a program for Fall national defense and trade extension classes to be offered at the Senior high school. The program was drawn up by Oberlander.

Fall classes are scheduled to begin Sept. 23 and applications will be accepted at the Ohio State Employment office, 59 North Diamond street, Sept. 19 and 20.

Pre-employment classes will be offered men not employed and will operate six hours a day and five days a week for a period of 10 weeks, for a total of 300 hours. Classes offered in this division are machine shop practice, auto mechanics shop practice, and electrical shop practice.

Supplementary classes will also be offered employed men who wish to further their knowledge along the lines of their present employment. These classes will be held in the evening for three hours a day and five days a week for a period of 12 weeks.

Machine shop practice, auto mechanics shop practice, electric shop practice, blue print reading, gas and electric welding practice and drawing will be the subjects studied in the supplementary classes.

Trade extension classes will also be offered in machine shop theory, electric shop theory, automotive shop theory, gas and electric welding theory, interior decorating theory, blue print reading and shop mathematics.

The evening classes in the various courses offered will enable men to advance in their chosen lines more rapidly and efficiently and finally qualify them to fill higher positions than would otherwise be open to them, Oberlander said.

The program as outlined by Oberlander is subject to approval by the state department of vocational education.
